SECTION-A

(READING SKILLS)

1. Read the passage given below and answer the questions that follow:

(A) What do we typically do when we find our children doing something we don't approve of? We become reactive parents. Often, we pepper our reactions with lectures. When it doesn't work and predictably so we end up screaming and dole out a punishment. And our children react with anger, resentment or 'can't-be-bothered' attitude.

(B) Buddhist Zen Master Thich Nhat Hanh put it beautifully when he described how each child has both negative seeds of anger, despair, hatred, fear and violence- and wholesome seeds- of love, happiness, compassion and forgiveness. According to him, what will blossom depends on the seeds we nurture.

(C) A parenting and educational approach that's gaining a large following internationally, called the Nurtured Heart Approach (NHA) by Howard Glasser, is very much in keeping with this Zen approach. The three main aspects of this approach are:

- Refuse to energize negativity.
- Relentlessly energize their positives.
- Reset Do not react negatively and stay calm when the child does something wrong.

Parents following this approach commit to not saying or doing anything that may fuel negativity in the child. But the parent has to make sure she/he does this very calmly, without any anger or resentment.

(D) While on a mission to cut the negative, the parent looks for every opportunity to energize the positive in the child. This is done through persistently appreciating the goodness in the child in the smallest of ways: You were really generous about sharing your pizza with your sister; I appreciate the hard work you have put in your project; It takes courage to stand up to a bully. If you observe, the appreciation is not about saying "excellent", "amazing" or "good", which is really an empty praise and does not speak much to the child. Qualifying praise, on the other hand, gives the child direction and she/he begins to understand what qualities, values and strengths are appreciated. These are also necessary ingredients of life skills and success.

(E) This approach is not merely about noticing when the child is being good, it is about recognizing the child's worth at every step. It's about aligning his energy in believing that he has great qualities, which are being identified and validated by the parents at every step. He realizes that there is no point choosing negativity, as there are no pay-offs in it. So, start building your child's inner wealth - there is nothing to lose.

Answer the following questions, based on the given passage:

2. Read the following instructions very carefully and strictly follow them:

In recent years, the habit of reading among high school students has seen a steady decline. The advent of digital media, social media platforms, and the easy access to online video content has contributed significantly to this decline. According to a recent survey conducted by the National Education Research Institute (NERI), only 30% of students read books for pleasure, while 60% of students prefer online content. Furthermore, the reading habits among students who belong to urban areas are noticeably different from those in rural areas. The survey data reveals that in urban areas, 40% of students engage in digital reading, while only 15% read physical books. On the other hand, in rural areas, 25% of students read physical books, while just 10% engage in digital reading.

The decline in reading habits is alarming as reading improves comprehension, vocabulary, and critical thinking. Educational experts have expressed concern over how this shift might impact the intellectual and emotional development of students in the long run. To counter this, schools are incorporating technology-based reading platforms, organizing reading marathons, and initiating peer group discussions to encourage students to read more.

Graph:

(6x1=6)

(a) "Why do you do this?" I ask Saheb whom I encounter every morning scrounging for gold in the garbage dumps of my neighbourhood. Saheb left his home long ago. Set amidst the green fields of Dhaka, his home is not even a distant memory. There were many storms that swept away their fields and homes, his mother tells him. That's why they left, looking for gold in the big city where he now lives. "I have nothing else to do," he mutters, looking away. "Go to school," I say glibly, realizing immediately how hollow the advice must sound. "There is no school in my neighbourhood. When they build one, I will go."
